Downtown is the urban center of the City of Pittsburgh. Also known as the Golden Triangle and the Central Business District, it is located where the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers meet to become the Ohio River. As the Central Business District for Pittsburgh, Downtown is home to a number of major corporation headquarters. It is the second largest business district in Pennsylvania, only behind that of Philadelphia. It is also the hub of the seat of government with city, county, state and federal offices located Downtown.

In recent years, Downtown has witnessed a marked rise in its residential community. With the green movement afoot, people are glad to live close to where they work. Downtown adds a smorgasbord of amenities for almost everyone’s pleasure.

Pittsburghers have been lured by the wealth of services offered by the area. Point State Park, at the tip of the Golden Triangle, offers stunning vistas of the 3 rivers and its surrounding hillsides. The Cultural District, the area comprised of Penn and Liberty Avenues by the Allegheny River, includes numerous theaters, galleries and concert halls, such as Heinz Hall, Byham Theater, O’Reilly Theater, Benedum Center and Wood Street Galleries. Dining options are numerous and diverse, as evidenced by the recently completed Market Square, long the home of some of the regions favorite traditional establishments now being joined by new dining ventures.
