Students To Meet 31 Nobel Laureates

Carnegie Mellon graduate students Michael Polen and Chenjie Zeng will be among 400 young scientists from 76 countries who will join 31 Nobel Laureates in Lindau, Germany, June 25-30.
DIY Robot Design

A new interactive design tool developed by Carnegie Mellon’s Robotics Institute enables you to build customized legged or wheeled robots using 3-D-printed components and off-the-shelf actuators.

Sci-Fi Storyteller

The creator of the hit TV shows “The Bionic Woman” and “The Incredible Hulk” has released his latest novel, “The Man of Legends.”
Jessica Tones is a dietitian and nutrition expert who can help you eat healthier.

Calendar Highlights

Today
Fitness Center Tours

June 26-27
Academic Success in College: Starting off on the Right Foot

June 27
* Email Me! Proficient, Polite and Persuasive Messages
Blood Drive at Software Engineering Institute

June 28
* Master the Project: Strategies for the Non-Project Manager

June 29
* Competency Highlight: Intercultural Awareness
Fitness Center Tours

July 6
New Hire Orientation

July 12
* Set Up for Success: Onboarding Strategies for New Employees

July 14
* Information Architecture for Web

July 18
* Digital Accessibility: CMS and Your Website
* Professional Development Workshop

Personal Mentions
Irene Fonseca has been appointed to the Abel Prize Committee by the Norwegian Academy of Science and Letters.

Bin He has been named head of the Biomedical Engineering Department, effective Feb. 1, 2018.

Pulkit Grover received a $600,000 National Science Foundation award to conduct research on reliable and efficient Internet of Things systems with applications in biomedical sensing and imaging.

Jesse Dunietz will spend 10 weeks this summer at the New York offices of Scientific American magazine as an American Association for the Advancement of Science Mass Media fellow.

Sam Ventura has been hired by the Pittsburgh Penguins to be their full time director of hockey research.

News Briefs
- Mellon College of Science Honors Staff Award Winners
- Andy Award Nominations Due July 6
- Success in College: Start Your Student Off on the Right Foot
- Weight Watchers at Work Starts July 12
- "Tartan Ink" Now Accepting Copy, Print & Ship Orders
- Tennis Anyone?

See something? Say something. Help ensure the safety and well-being of the CMU community by calling:

University Police: 412-268-2323
Ethics Hotline: 1-877-700-7050