

Thermal Comfort and Productivity

Shin-ichi Tanabe, Ph.D, Waseda University

Shin-ichi Tanabe, Ph.D. is a Professor at the Department of Architecture, Waseda University and an expert in the fields of indoor air quality and thermal comfort. He received the R.G. Nevins Award from ASHRAE in 1989, and the Prize of Outstanding Research from the Architectural Institute of Japan in 2002. Dr. Tanabe is serving as President of ISIAQ Academy of Fellows and worked at the Technical University of Denmark as a guest professor during 2002-2003. Recently, Dr. Tanabe received ASHRAE's (American Society of Heating, Refrigerating, and Air-conditioning Engineers) Fellow award.

Wednesday, January 28, 2009

4:30pm

Adamson Wing
136A Baker Hall

Cosponsored by the Center for Building Performance and Diagnostics, School of Architecture