Admission

If you're excited about Carnegie Mellon, we're eager to learn more about you and support you through every step of the admission process.

Things we consider: Your high school performance, including if you've challenged yourself with a rigorous curriculum, your grades and trends, GPA and class rank (for schools that rank students). We'll also consider the following non-academic information: extracurricular involvement, part-time jobs, family commitments, hobbies, community engagement, collaboration, perseverance, passion, advocacy for others and self-direction, counselor and teacher recommendation letters, the Common Application essay and Carnegie Mellon short answer questions.

Things we don't accept: Demonstrated interest in our admission process or supplementary submission of materials (including resumes, research abstracts, writing samples, multimedia demonstrations of talents and maker portfolios).

Please note Carnegie Mellon University has adopted a test-optional policy for Fall 2023 applicants, removing the SAT/ACT standardized testing requirement. Pursuant to this policy, students who choose not to submit standardized test scores will be considered equally for admission along with those who submit scores.

Financial Aid

Carnegie Mellon is committed to meeting the demonstrated need of our undergraduate students. We also utilize a need-blind admission policy, so applying for financial aid won't affect your chances for admission.

Please note that Carnegie Mellon offers financial aid to U.S. citizens, permanent residents and DACA recipients. If you're an international student who plans to enroll at Carnegie Mellon, you and your family must assume the total cost of attendance.

Types of Aid Offered:

- Need-based grants
- Student employment
- Loans

Applying for Financial Aid

To apply for financial aid at Carnegie Mellon, you'll submit the following documents:

- Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)
- CSS Profile
- Tax documents
