Teaching and Academic Support

Source Data:

The data used for the Teaching and Academic Support section of this book comes from multiple data sources, as listed below:

Academic Development: Academic Development

Pittsburgh Council on Higher Education (PCHE) & Pittsburgh Filmmakers: Units both taught by PCHE schools and taken by PCHE students are collected through the Student Information System (SIS)

Eberly Center for Teaching Excellence: Eberly Center for Teaching Excellence

The Intercultural Communication Center: The Intercultural Communication Center

Library Collections & Utilization: University Libraries

Media Technology Services: Media Technology Services

Units Taught: Student Information System (SIS)

Video Viewing Cluster: University Libraries

Definitions:

PCHE: Pittsburgh Council on Higher Education - a consortium of the ten accredited colleges and universities in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. As part of the consortium agreement, full-time graduate or undergraduate students at each PCHE school can cross-register at any other PCHE school at no additional expense to the student.

Pittsburgh Filmmakers: Carnegie Mellon students are eligible to take courses at Pittsburgh Filmmakers at no additional expense to the student.

Units Taught:

Academic Year: Consists of the fall and spring semesters of a given academic year

Data Source: All units taught are taken from the Student Information System (SIS) at the completion of each semester, except for Fall 2007 units taught. This data is taken from SIS as of the last fiscal day of September 2007.

Level: Based on the level of the student taking each course

Other: Includes units taught to special/non-degree students and students from other colleges attending Carnegie Mellon through the Pittsburgh Council of Higher Education (PCHE)

Units: A student earns a specified number of units for each course taken at the university. Three (3) units are the equivalent of one (1) credit hour. The total units taught by a department is calculated by summing the units taken by each student for each course taught by the department.

Academic Development's mission is to assist students in developing the skills, strategies, and behaviors needed to perform as confident, independent, and active learners. Their services are designed to help both students who are having academic difficulties and those who just want to improve their performance. Currently four programs are available to assist students: supplemental instruction, peer tutoring, academic counseling, and study groups.

Supplemental Instruction

The Supplemental Instruction (SI) Program offers review sessions for traditionally difficult courses. Sessions are offered two times each week for targeted courses and are conducted by students who have previously done well in the course. Designed to supplement, not replace, class lectures and TA recitations, the sessions are interactive and student-friendly. Attendance is voluntary. Nationwide studies have shown the SI participants earn higher grades and withdraw less often than non-SI participants.

Walk-in Peer Tutoring

Walk-in Peer Tutoring (PT) offers subject-specific tutoring geared primarily (but not exclusively) towards large introductory level courses. Tutoring is conducted on a walk-in basis in select residence halls and is scheduled Sundays through Thursdays from 8:30 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. during the fall and spring semesters.

Standing Appointment Tutoring

Standing appointments are available upon student request for various university courses. After completing a tutor request form, students meet weekly with a peer tutor to discuss and review course content.

Academic Counseling

Academic Counseling (AC) provides both group and individual study skills instruction. Group workshops are available several times each semester and cover topics such as exam preparation, time management, and citing sources. Students interested in individual appointments are first given a Study Skills Assessment. Students who require additional help can meet individually with learning specialists. Workshops are open to all students.

Study Groups

Formal study groups were piloted in Spring 2007. The groups are facilitated by a group leader and are limited to six students. The focus of these groups is on student interaction and cooperative learning.

Since 1982, the Eberly Center's mission has been to enhance the quality of education at Carnegie Mellon by working with faculty and graduate students to help them better understand and improve student learning. Toward that end, the Eberly Center has collaborated with over a thousand faculty members across every department. This brief document describes both the work of the Eberly Center and the rationale behind its approach.

THE EBERLY CENTER'S APPROACH IS . . .

- Learner-centered: Student learning is placed at the center of the teaching process, helping faculty and graduate students to develop course objectives, assessments, and instructional activities that together support and promote student learning and performance.
- Educational: Faculty and graduate students are assisted in gaining a deeper understanding of the principles that underlie effective learning and teaching so that they can make appropriate teaching decisions for their own courses. The Eberly Center does not simply dispense teaching tips.
- Collaborative: The center works closely with faculty and graduate students to help them identify their strengths as teachers and to jointly devise strategies for course improvement and educational innovation.
- Constructive: The focus is on providing constructive and practical feedback to help Carnegie Mellon colleagues succeed as educators. The center's role is to support teaching, not to judge performance.
- Data-driven: Extensive data is gathered and analyzed through classroom observations, student focus groups, and examinations of teaching materials. The center helps faculty members and graduate students use these data to diagnose strengths and identify areas for improvement.
- Research-based: State-of-the-art research is applied from a range of disciplines to help faculty and graduate students design and teach more effective courses. Original research is conducted where gaps in the literature exist.

THE EBERLY CENTER OFFERS . . .

- Individual consultations with faculty and graduate students
- Resources for faculty, including sample syllabi, model grading rubrics, informational booklets and web-based documents
- Workshops and seminars for faculty, graduate students, and department heads
- Collaboration with faculty on educational projects
- Institutional research that impacts educational practice and policy

THE EBERLY CENTER WORKS WITH . . .

- All faculty members who teach (e.g., tenure-track, teaching-track, visiting, adjunct) and graduate students (teaching assistant, instructor, and future faculty) who want to reflect upon and improve their teaching. This includes faculty and graduate students who are:
 - new to Carnegie Mellon and want to calibrate to our students and the institution
 - experienced and successful teachers who want to try new techniques, approaches, or technologies
 - encountering difficulties in their courses and want help identifying and addressing problems
 - new to teaching and want help getting started (including graduate students who anticipate pursuing an academic career)

CONSULTATIONS ARE . . .

- Strictly confidential: The Eberly Center does not disclose any information from consultations. This includes the identities of those with whom the center works, the information that is shared, and data that is gathered on their behalf via classroom observations and interactions with TAs and undergraduate students.
- Documented for faculty and graduate student purposes alone: Written feedback is provided to the colleagues with whom the center consults, that summarizes and documents the consultation process. Letters of support are not written for reappointment, promotion or tenure, but faculty can choose to use the documentation as they see fit.
- Completely voluntary: The center does not seek out faculty and graduate students, but is happy to meet with anyone who contacts them.

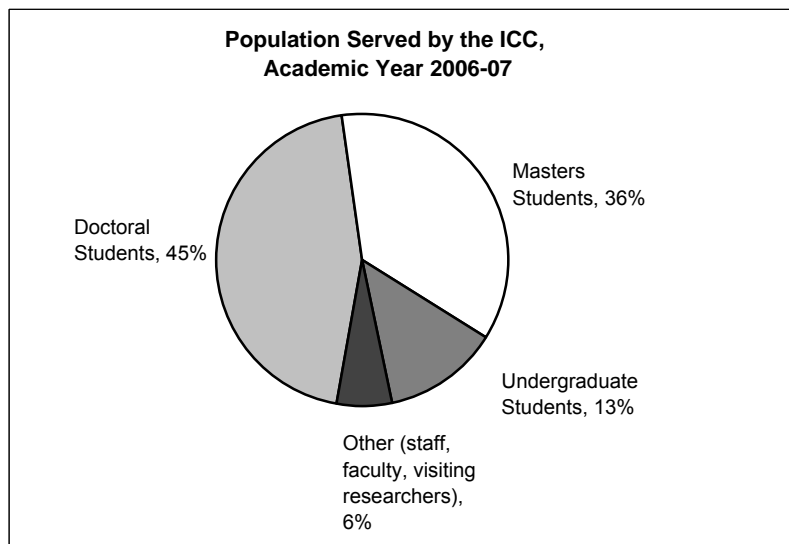

EXPERTISE AND EXPERIENCE

The Eberly Center brings twenty-five years of experience and diverse disciplinary perspectives to bear on teaching and educational issues. The staff includes two cognitive psychologists, a cultural anthropologist, a civil and environmental engineer, a historian, a social psychologist, and a statistician. All staff members have doctorates, teach classes, advise students, serve on committees, write proposals and conduct and publish research (albeit to a lesser degree given their other responsibilities). The center is engaged in the same activities as faculty members and thus understand the pressures faculty face in fulfilling their various roles and responsibilities.

The Intercultural Communication Center (ICC) provides language support services to all non-native English speakers at Carnegie Mellon (international students as well as students who attended all or part of high school or college in the United States). Since the ICC's inception in 1985, this support has become increasingly crucial as the number of international students at the university has grown from 350 to over 2,380, now constituting roughly 14% of undergraduates and over 40% of graduate students.

The Mission of the ICC is to:

- Provide support to help non-native English speakers, both graduates and undergraduates, succeed in their academic programs:
 ICC offers over 27 classes, workshops, and seminars as well as individual tutoring throughout the academic year and summer. Students can also have a placement interview for individual feedback on language skills and recommended ICC support.
- Help international teaching assistants and faculty develop the skills needed to provide effective instruction at Carnegie Mellon:
 ICC provides training for non-native English speakers preparing for teaching assistant jobs and also assesses the speaking fluency before non-native English speakers can work as TAs (required by Carnegie Mellon University policy and Pennsylvania law). If requested, ICC helps international faculty develop language skills and/or culturally appropriate teaching skills.
- Help both the university and departments identify and respond to the changing needs of non-native English speakers and international students:
 ICC offers pre-admission phone interviews to evaluate the speaking fluency of international applicants. ICC also runs workshops for domestic faculty, students, and staff to help them learn to communicate more effectively with non-native English speakers.

Electronic Information Resources and Access

The University Libraries provide access to a variety of digital information, including the library catalog, other local databases, and a growing number of commercial databases that are licensed for use by the university community. Access methods continue to change as the delivery of electronic information evolves. Currently, Internet (web) access predominates.

The web-based library catalog (Cameo) contains records of items owned by the libraries, as well as items on order or being cataloged for library collections. Cameo is part of a system that integrates acquisitions and cataloging functions with circulation, reserve, and user service functions. Users can see if items are available or checked out when they use the library catalog; they can also request services (such as Renew Item or Request Check-out item).

Users may access Cameo from any computer with Internet capability at: <http://www.library.cmu.edu>

As the digital library environment matures, more full-text documents and images are becoming available. Some vendors who are providing full-text documents are no longer reporting numbers of searches.
