FROM THE ASSOCIATE DEAN

I am honored to join the Carnegie Mellon University community as the associate dean for parent and family engagement and first-year orientation. In this new role, I will be working with parents and family members to be a resource and advocate so you have the tools to be an informed supporter of your student.

An important outcome of the undergraduate university experience is for our students to develop the life skills necessary to successfully navigate their personal affairs and develop independence as young adults. However, we also know that parents and family members play an important and supportive role in their student's life and are key partners in our students' success. I hope you'll continue to use this newsletter for information about campus opportunities, important events and developmental milestones in your student's experience in order to enhance your meaningful conversations with your student about their CMU journey.

I look forward to meeting many of you in person at future campus events. Until then, please don't hesitate to reach out if I can be of any assistance at julieschultz@cmu.edu or 412-268-2075.

FEATURES

The Olitsky Family Foundation Career-Readiness Program at CMU

New this year, this program breaks down the barriers-of-entry to the career search process for students with emotional and cognitive differences by taking a unique approach that incorporates students, the campus community and CMU’s employer-partners.
