Big Straw Magazine

Big Straw Magazine is a student-run Asian interest magazine that provides students with an outlet for artistic expression, cultural identity, and thought. Big Straw started in Spring 2006 as part of an Interpretation and Argument class on Asian American Literature. The professor at the time, Dr. John Eperjesi, was finishing his doctorate at CMU and was moving to Korea soon. He assigned the students a final project: to create an Asian interest magazine that could be published and distributed to the school community, even after he left. The students worked on the magazine after class and met with the professor over bubble tea, and the first issue was released at the end of the semester. Big Straw was founded with the mission to cultivate and spread culture, creativity, and ideas. We strive not to define or reshape the Asian American culture, but to break down barriers and enable students to discover more about themselves and each other. Big Straw Magazine is the Asian interest publication that started over a cup of bubble tea.

WRCT

WRCT is Carnegie Mellon's radio station, broadcasting to all of the Pittsburgh area on 88.3fm and to the world via our streams on <http://www.wrct.org/>. Our mission is to provide locally-produced content of interest to the Carnegie Mellon and Pittsburgh communities that cannot be heard anywhere else, exposing listeners to music and talk we feel is underrepresented. At the same time, we provide an entirely student-run environment for our members to teach and to learn everything related to radio. Contact training@wrct.org to learn more about how to get involved!
