Ways to Fund Study Abroad

Sponsored Programs (Semester or Year)
Students pay regular Carnegie Mellon tuition (junior-year tuition rates), room and board, and Technology Fee while receiving the same financial aid package (minus work study) while abroad. Carnegie Mellon will pay tuition, room*, board* and approved fees to the study abroad institution or program and will distribute funds to the student for other fees as appropriate. *In cases where room and/or board are not included in the program’s package, funds will be distributed to the student.

Exchange Programs (Semester or Year)
These programs are reciprocal. We also receive students from the institutions to which we send students. Carnegie Mellon students participating in these programs continue to pay tuition directly to Carnegie Mellon and receive the same financial aid package. Students are responsible for paying all other fees, such as room and board, directly to the exchange institution.

External Programs (Semester, Year, or Summer)
External Programs offer many options for students in all majors for summer, semester, and full-year study abroad. These programs are administered by another university or study abroad program provider. External Programs allow students to pay the study abroad program directly, while still maintaining full-time enrollment status at Carnegie Mellon. Students participating in External Programs do not pay tuition and fees (except for the Technology Fee) to Carnegie Mellon for the time abroad.

Students cannot use institutional aid from Carnegie Mellon (grants, scholarships, etc. which are administered by Carnegie Mellon) on these programs, but students are eligible for federal and state aid and all loans normally received. Some External Programs allow students to enroll directly in the university or institution, which is a good opportunity for students seeking language fluency and cultural immersion.
