Description

Deewane is Carnegie Mellon University's premier South Asian a cappella group. We are known on campus and around the country for our unique ability to blend music from all ends of the spectrum - East and West. With their name being Hindi for "madly in love", the group was founded in the fall semester of 2007 by a group of Carnegie Mellon students who wanted to showcase their passion for music. We have recently taken up traveling much more, becoming more and more popular around the country. This has stretched our budget more than usual, but it has been worth the benefit of spreading our name and expanding our PR.
