HOW TO HIRE INTERNATIONAL CANDIDATES

Interested in recruiting international students? Let's navigate this together.

Pittsburgh is a hotbed of college talent as home to more than 130,000 students. About 12,000 of these students are internationals and approximately 7,400 of these internationals are pursuing degrees at Carnegie Mellon University (CMU), while in the U.S. on F-1 student visas.

As competition for these students intensifies, the CMU Tepper School and Heinz College worked with a group of partners in higher education and technology in Pittsburgh to launch Go Global, an effort to demystify the process of international hiring for employers. The initiative kicked off with a Fall workshop at the Tepper School that included panels of legal, employer, and college experts who shared best practices in recruiting, hiring, and onboarding international talent. Follow-up table discussions focused on how to get your C-suite and hiring managers on board. Check out the video highlights here.

Whether your company is currently hiring international talent or not, your organization will benefit from an ongoing effort to make Pittsburgh and all U.S. cities more diverse, inclusive, and attractive to all talent.

Tepper Take-Off: Leon Mangey, Summer Associate, Baird Capital

The Transition to an MBA:

While in a corporate finance role at a wellness real estate startup, Leon Mangey (Tepper MBA, 2026) had a chance to observe his entrepreneur managers transform his standard accounting reports and create models they would then share with investors for future capital raise opportunities. It was a 'light bulb moment' for Leon. He wanted to transition his career into investment banking, and he wanted an MBA program that would give him the platform he needed to succeed. But how to get there?

That's when Carnegie Mellon University Tepper student ambassadors stepped in to tell Leon about the Tepper Masters Career Center (MCC) Banking Immersion Program. Hosted by the MCC's veteran finance career coaches, Jackie Goslin and Jack Vogel, the program is both educational and interactive and has been a game changer for so many MBA students. Leon was able to gain exposure to various actively recruiting banks, speak to Tepper alumni and other I-Bankers to ask questions, learn about each bank's unique culture, and assess exactly where he could fit.

How Tepper Alumni Give Back through MCC Programming:

When Baird Investment Banking Associate and Tepper Alumnus, Emily Journès-Metcalf, stepped in to spearhead a virtual corporate presentation as part of Banking Immersion Week, Leon's vision came into focus. In Emily's words, "As an alum of Tepper and the investment banking recruiting process, I knew the value that the MCC could provide through its Banking Immersion week. I attended one during my time at Tepper and found it an invaluable way to hear first-hand from alums about their experience in the industry. When I joined Baird full time after graduating, participating in Banking Immersion week was a priority and gratifying way to give back to the Tepper community. Jackie Goslin made it easy to participate, scheduling times well in advance and setting up a smooth, virtual process. We came prepared with the presentation and Jackie came prepared with everything else such as candidate resumes and a slate of talented MBA students who attended the presentation."

After that tailored presentation, Leon knew exactly what he needed to do to keep the Baird conversations flowing. A dozen interviews later, including an on-site Chicago based company visit, Leon landed that coveted Baird Summer Associate offer.

The Tepper MCC proudly partners with their dedicated alums to offer programming that delivers yet another Tepper Take-Off Success story.

CONGRATULATIONS Leon Mangey, newest Summer 2025 Associate at Baird. We cannot wait for you to embark on your transition to your investment banking dream job!
